President's Report

By Anne Podney

Anne Podney

As summer winds down to a close, it's time for us at the San Diego District Tennis Association (SDDTA) to review where we are and what we hope to accomplish in the coming months. The four big tournaments of the summer: La Jolla Championships, Balboa, District Championships and Metropolitan saw numbers of participants that were steady or growing. I was pleased to see many former juniors enter the tournaments, as well as a growing contingent from Orange County. Well run tournaments with responsive tournament directors and considerate scheduling help give San Diego tournaments a good name.

Once again, Tennis Fest was a high point in summer activities. Approximately 700 enthusiasts came out to demo racquets, participate in drills and clinics and just have a great time. Special thanks for a successful day go to Jeff Anderson, Amanda Fink, Mary Grace Braun, Jim Winters and Jesse Steinberg—the latter two were responsible for the abundance of eager high school volunteers. Lesley Waite was presented with the Ben Press Award for Community Service. She was recognized for her many years of service in all aspects of San Diego tennis.

Our community tennis programming continues. Teaching pro Rod Rodriguez headed a Family Tennis Day at El Toyon Park in National City on October 12 with the assistance of Karen Ronney, SCTA Tennis Service Representative for San Diego County. Juan Villeneuve continues to teach Drop In Tennis classes in South Bay. He is starting a new program at Salt Creek Recreation Center in Chula Vista and has had much success with the District program of free clinics for beginning adult players. The District wants to sponsor more such programs in East and North County.

On Sunday, October 20, at Balboa Tennis Club, a special celebration and tribute to great friends Ben Press and Maureen Connolly Brinker was held at the new Press Family Pavilion (tournament desk area) & Maureen Connolly Brinker (life-size paver). As Colleen Farrell, Club Director, wrote, "Their unique memorials will live on adjacent to each other at Balboa Tennis Club, in the neighborhood they grew up and played in together. Great memories for their families and generations to come of aspiring tennis players." In honoring these two San Diego greats, the area is a wonderful addition to the club. The SDDTA is one of the $1,000 donors whose names will be honored on the plaque.

At the recent 2019 USPTA World Conference in Las Vegas, San Diego pro Amanda Fink was one of the speakers. The National Under 30 Award is given to a young and upcoming pro that has demonstrated passion for the industry, accomplishments at their place of work and their efforts in growing the game.

Congratulations, Amanda!

91st District Championships

At the 91st Annual San Diego District Championships, the last weekend of August and continuing through Labor Day weekend, the competition lived up to its usual high standards. We appreciate the American Melanoma Foundation, our title sponsor again this year. With more players wanting to get into the draws we extended the entry deadline to accommodate them. As in the past, many college students took advantage of the discounted entry fee we offered. This has been a very successful change and some of the larger tournaments are following the trend to help increase participation.

Players from as far away as Virginia, Arizona, Washington, and Oregon entered to try and win a piece of the $4000 in prize money offered to the Open and Age divisions. After many hard-fought matches local San Diegan Ryan Seggerman, now playing for Princeton, took the men's Open singles title defeating Alexander Araouzos in the final. The men's 40s-65s were all well attended with rounds of 16. In the women's Open the title went to 16-year-old Midori Castillo who defeated tough opponents along the way. Unfortunately the women's age divisions still suffer from low turnout. Even with many divisions offered no women players entered any of the events in singles or doubles. The Mixed Open and Mixed 40s provided some exciting play.

The ever popular men's and women's NTRP divisions were well supported. A good turnout in all these divisions made for some interesting draws. Glass mug trophies were given to the winners and finalists, (liquid refreshments not included). Complimentary t-shirts were given to all the players as well.

As all tournament directors know, without a good team of volunteers to keep the tournament running on time and smoothly, things can get a little chaotic. Thanks to Peggy Jung, Jim Winters, Marty Molden, Robyn Leong and Pat Mason (for her beautiful trophy table), this didn't happen. Their help will always be greatly appreciated. A special shout-out to the San Diego County Tennis Umpires Association for their participation and help in making the tournament run smooth as well.

Hope to see you all in 2020!

Wounded, Ill and Injured Tennis Clinics and Camps-Why Do We Do Them?

There's an old line: "If you can read this, thank a teacher. If you're reading it in English, thank the military." Unfortunately, this often comes with a heavy price. Many military service members don't make it back. And many come back injured physically, mentally, or both. For the past 10 years we've been working with Naval Medical Center San Diego (NMCS D) and the San Diego VA Medical Center to do what we can to help make the service members' and veterans' returns and their quality of life as smooth as possible.

According to the Head of NMCS D's Health and Wellness Department, Melissa Palacios, "Research has shown that early intervention with active sports results in successful rehabilitation. Sudden, traumatic changes in physical ability make service members vulnerable to psychological, emotional and physical trauma, which severely impacts them and their families. Many times, someone experiencing a newly acquired physical disability has difficulty re-adjusting into the work setting in a productive manner. Partaking in events has allowed service members to obtain greater levels of self-actualization, improved levels of community re-entry, increased ability to alleviate stress, and better methods for coping. It is through the intervention of recreation participation that enables them to rehabilitate back into life and gives them a bridge to the community."

The VA Medical Center's recreational Therapist, Ellen Berman, added, "I have worked closely with the amazing volunteers at the San Diego District Tennis Association for numerous years. I regularly refer patients to their tennis program, all with positive results. They have helped patients with a variety of injuries ranging from traumatic brain injury and polytrauma, spinal cord injury, mobility and/or psychiatric disabilities, and loss of limb injuries. Intervention using adaptive sport assists our Veterans to battle back from injury. Participation not only strengthens their bodies but assists with overcoming and improving their overall being and self-worth." Pretty heavy stuff.

This also comes with a price, but this time it's a financial cost. At the relatively inexpensive end of the chain, we run free weekly 90 minute tennis clinics for 20-25 vets, followed by a free lunch. The teaching pros volunteer their services, but the food and beverages, also purchased and prepared by volunteers, do cost money. The clinics are held every Tuesday, 11:00am – 1:00pm at Balboa Tennis Club.

At the other end of the financial chain, each May we run a week-long, all-expense-paid tennis camp, where we fly in 50 disabled veterans, caretakers and service animals from across the US; provide tennis rackets, shoes, and other equipment, 16 hours of tennis instruction, accommodations in Mission Valley, transportation to/from tennis and evening events, and all meals.

Based on the overwhelmingly positive feedback from the campers and their healthcare providers, we have been extremely successful in providing a foundation for the development of a positive self-image and outlook on life. This transformation is a key factor in leading an independent, full and productive life. Now you know why we do it.

19th Annual Tennis Fest

Tennis Fest, the free signature event of the San Diego District Tennis Association was, once again, a big success. The June community tennis celebration was held on the 25 courts at Balboa Tennis Club. Volunteer tennis professionals and instructors were on court introducing people of all ages and skills to the sport.

From beginners to intermediates to advanced kids and adults, courts featured favorite games like "Hit for Prizes". Spectators delighted in watching little children hitting their foam ball over the net for the first time. Their joy was palpable. Skilled participants showed their stuff on the "Beat the Pro" court. Other courts offered specific stroke instruction. Sponsors donated items for the raffle that followed the on-court fun.

Lesley Waite was honored with the Ben Press Award for Community Service. She has spent 34 years volunteering locally in the adult and senior tennis community.
